

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT TACOMA

CLAYTON ERNEST LONGACRE,

Plaintiff,

v.

TROOPER RONALD SMARR,
WILBUR & ASSOCIATES, JOHN
DOE OF WILBUR & ASSOCIATES,

Defendants.

CASE NO. C18-5779RBL

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on competing Motions for Summary Judgment [Dkts. 63 & 66]. The facts of the case are described in prior Orders. [Dkt. #s 28, 38, 53, 57 and 62]

The last remaining defendant, State Trooper Smarr, argues that he had probable cause to arrest Longacre for driving with a suspended license, and that he is entitled to qualified immunity even if he did violate Longacre's constitutional rights. He argues that he did not have any personal participation in the conduct Longacre alleges about the other, since-dismissed defendants, including Mason County and Wilber and Associates.

Longacre's Summary Judgment Motion [Dkt. # 66] argues that the dismissal of his misdemeanor arrest established as a matter of law that Smarr did not have probable cause for his

1 arrest, and that Smarr violated his rights by failing to establish individualized probable cause
2 before making the arrest. For the reasons below, Longacre's Motion is DENIED. Smarr's
3 Motion is GRANTED, and Longacre's claims against Smarr are DISMISSED WITH
4 PREJUDICE.

5 I. FACTS

6 On July 4, 2015, Trooper Smarr approached a motorist in the Lake Cushman area who 7 was stuck in a ditch. A Mason County Sheriff deputy was already on site. Two men, including
8 Longacre, were attaching a "tow strap" to the disabled vehicle and to their pick-up. Smarr
9 suspected the woman who drove the car into the ditch was intoxicated. Longacre informed
10 Trooper Smarr that they would drive the woman's car and the pick-up away from the scene and 11 drive to a nearby property owned by Longacre. Trooper Smarr obtained Longacre's license and 12 ran a check to verify his ability to drive lawfully. Smarr's check of Washington Department of 13 Licensing records revealed that Longacre's drivers' license was suspended. After Smarr
14 informed Longacre his status as suspended driver, Longacre got into the pick-up and pulled the 15 disabled car out of the ditch and onto the highway. Smarr determined he had probable cause to 16 arrest Longacre for driving on a suspended license in violation of RCW 46.20.342(1).

17 Longacre was incarcerated in the jail and released later that same morning. Longacre 18 claims that the charges were dismissed without a trial, although no proof of the dismissal in 19 paper form is provided to this Court.

20 II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

21 Summary judgment is proper "if the pleadings, the discovery and disclosure materials on 22 file, and any affidavits show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the 23 movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). In determining whether 24

1 an issue of fact exists, the Court must view all evidence in the light most favorable to the 2 nonmoving party and draw all reasonable inferences in that party's favor. Anderson v. Liberty
3 Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248-50 (1986); Bagdadi v. Nazar, 84 F.3d 1194, 1197 (9th Cir. 1996).
4 A genuine issue of material fact exists where there is sufficient evidence for a reasonable
5 factfinder to find for the nonmoving party. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248. The inquiry is "whether 6 the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so
7 one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 251-52. The moving party bears 8 the initial burden of showing that there is no evidence which supports an element essential to the 9 nonmovant's claim. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). Once the movant has 10 met this burden, the nonmoving party then must show that there is a genuine issue for trial.
11 Anderson, 477 U.S. at 250. If the nonmoving party fails to establish the existence of a genuine
12 issue of material fact, "the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Celotex, 477
13 U.S. at 323-24. There is no requirement that the moving party negate elements of the non-
14 movant's case. Lujan v. National Wildlife Federation, 497 U.S. 871 (1990). Once the moving 15 party has met its burden, the non-movant must then produce concrete evidence, without merely 16 relying on allegations in the pleadings, that there remain genuine factual issues. Anderson, 477
17 U.S. 242, 248 (1986).

18 III. ANALYSIS

19 A. Qualified Immunity Bars Longacre's Claims Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983

20 Qualified immunity shields government officials from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983
21 unless their conduct violates clearly established constitutional rights. Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S.
22 194, 201, 121 S. Ct. 2151, 150 L.Ed.2d 272 (2001). Entitlement to qualified immunity is a
23 question of law. Elder v. Holloway, 510 U.S. 510, 516, 114 S. Ct. 1019, 127 L.Ed.2d 344 (1994).
24

1 In determining whether Trooper Smarr is entitled to qualified immunity, the Court
2 engages in a two-part analysis, looking to whether the alleged facts implicate the violation of a 3 constitutional right, and whether the right was “clearly established” at the time of the alleged 4 violation. Saucier, 533 U.S. at 201. The Court may consider those factors in any order it chooses.
5 Pearson v. Callahan, 555 U.S. 223, 236, 129 S. Ct. 808, 818, 172 L.Ed.2d 565 (2009).

6 1. Trooper Smarr Did Not Violate Longacre’s Fourth Amendment Rights

7 Claims for unlawful arrest are cognizable under § 1983 as a Fourth Amendment violation
8 only where the arrest is without probable cause. Lacey v. Maricopa Cnty., 693 F.3d 896, 918 (9th
9 Cir. 2012) (citing Dubner v. City & Cnty. of S.F., 266 F.3d 959, 964 (9th Cir. 2001)). Longacre
10 alleges he was unlawfully seized when Smarr arrested him for driving on a suspended license.
11 [Complaint, Dkt. 10]. But Smarr’s check of DOL records showed Longacre’s license was 12 suspended, and Longacre does not dispute this. While Longacre argues that Smarr did not have 13 probable cause because Smarr did not see him drive there, Washington law allows officers to 14 arrest whenever they have probable cause to believe a person has violated RCW 46.20.342,
15 regardless of whether the violation occurs in the officer’s presence. RCW 10.31.100(3)(f). More
16 to the point here, Longacre drove his pick-up truck in front of Smarr, pulling the disabled 17 vehicle out of the ditch.

18 Probable cause exists where the facts and circumstances within an officer’s knowledge
19 are sufficient to warrant a prudent person in believing that a crime has been committed. Beck v.
20 Ohio, 379 U.S. 89, 91, 85 S. Ct. 223, 225, 13 L. Ed. 2d 142 (1964). Probable cause is based on 21 “the totality of the circumstances known to the officer at the time” and requires only “a fair
22 probability or substantial chance of criminal activity.” United States v. Patayan Soriano, 361
23 F.3d 494, 505 (9th Cir. 2004). An officer is not required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that 24

1 a crime has been committed, nor “rule out all possibility of innocent behavior.” United States v.
2 Holland, 510 F.2d 453, 455 (9th Cir. 1975).

3 Here, Trooper Smarr ran a check to determine whether Longacre had a valid license that 4 would enable him to drive off in a vehicle Smarr was otherwise prepared to impound. Once the 5 check showed Longacre’s license was suspended and Trooper Smarr determined that Longacre
6 and his companion had arrived in a vehicle that they used to pull the other motorist from the 7 ditch, however, he lacked individualized probable cause to arrest them for DWLS. RCW
8 46.20.342(1)<sup>1</sup>. When Longacre drove the pick-up in the presence of Smarr, there was ample
9 proof of the inculpatory deed. Under both state and federal law, officers are entitled to rely on 10 the results of such records searches in determining whether probable cause exists. See King v.
11 Creed, 2015 WL 893573 (noting “[w]here it is undisputed that a police officer’s computer 12 indicates that an individual’s license has been suspended, courts have consistently held that the 13 officer has probable cause to arrest the driver for operating a motor vehicle without a license”); 14 State v. Gaddy, 152 Wash. 2d 64, 73-74, 93 P.3d 872 (2004) (holding that DOL records are 15 presumptively reliable and that a computerized search showing a license as suspended is 16 sufficient to support probable cause to arrest for DWLS under Washington law).

17 Longacre has argued elsewhere that his license was improperly suspended by DOL, 18 based on erroneous information provided by another officer based on a prior event. But the 19 underlying propriety of the suspension is not at issue. Longacre has not sued either the officer
20 who allegedly provided erroneous information to DOL, or DOL itself and, as the Court already

22 <sup>1</sup> Washington courts “have concluded that where officers do not have anything to independently connect an 23 individual to illegal activity, no probable cause exists and an arrest or search of that person is invalid under article I,
24 section 7.” State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135, para. 12 (2008). Longacre and his companion would not tell the officer who drove the pickup to the scene (both had suspended licenses). Longacre then drove the pickup in the Trooper’s presence.

1 noted, whether Longacre “could have plausibly blamed the [prior] officer for his error, or even
2 the DOL for the suspension, is moot given the passage of time.” [Dkt. 53 at 6]. There is no claim
3 that Smarr was involved in that earlier incident.

4 For purposes of the qualified immunity analysis, the only issue is whether Trooper Smarr
5 violated Longacre’s Fourth Amendment rights by unlawfully seizing him, arresting him, and/or 6 imprisoning him. Since a reasonable officer in Smarr’s position could conclude based on the 7 available information that he or she had probable cause to arrest Longacre for driving on a
8 suspended license, the answer to that inquiry is no. See Savare v. City of Federal Way, 2015 WL
9 3539585 (W.D. Wash. 2015). Probable cause is a complete defense to claims for both false
10 arrest and false imprisonment. The later dismissal of the misdemeanor charges without trial does 11 not impact the analysis or application of Qualified Immunity.

12 2. Trooper Smarr Is Entitled to Qualified Immunity

13 Qualified immunity bars suits under § 1983 unless the conduct at issue violates clearly 14 established rights which a reasonable officer would have known. White v. Pauly, 137 S. Ct. 548, 15 551, 196 L. Ed. 2d 463 (2017). For a right to be clearly established, “existing precedent must 16 have placed the statutory or constitutional question beyond debate.” Id. (quoting Mullenix v.
17 Luna, 136 S. Ct. 305, 308, 193 L. Ed. 2d 255 (2015)). “Clearly established law” must not be 18 defined at “a high level of generality,” but must be “particularized” to the facts of the case.” Id.

19 Here, Longacre can point to no case law clearly establishing that arresting him under 20 these circumstances was unlawful, even if a reasonable juror or person might believe that the 21 trooper over-reacted.

22 B. Longacre’s Remaining Claims are Facially Deficient

23 Longacre’s remaining claims against Smarr are deficient as a matter of law because he 24 has not produced any evidence Smarr had any personal involvement in them, beyond his initial

1 arrest of Longacre. Longacre's claims for failure to train, depriving him access to a phone, and 2 false imprisonment from December 13-15, 2014 must also therefore be dismissed.

3 To maintain a § 1983 claim, Longacre must show Trooper Smarr caused or personally
4 participated in causing each constitutional deprivation of which he complains. Arnold v. IBM,
5 637 F.2d 1350, 1355 (9th Cir. 1981). To be liable for "causing" such a deprivation, Longacre
6 must plausibly allege that Smarr committed an affirmative act that he was legally required to do
7 and which caused his deprivation. Johnson v. Duffy, 588 F.2d 740, 743 (9th Cir. 1978). The 8 Court's inquiry is individualized and must focus on the duties and responsibilities of each
9 defendant whose acts are alleged to have caused a constitutional deprivation. Leer v. Murphy,
10 844 F.2d 628, 633 (9th Cir. 1988). Sweeping conclusory allegations are insufficient; Longacre
11 must set forth specific facts showing a causal connection between Smarr's actions and the harm
12 he allegedly suffered. See, e.g., Rizzo v. Goode, 423 U.S. 362, 370-71, 96 S. Ct. 598, 46 L.Ed.2d 13 561 (1976); Aldabe v. Aldabe, 616 F.2d 1089, 1092 (9th Cir. 1980).

14 Here, Longacre does not allege or demonstrate that Smarr accompanied him to the Mason
15 County Jail or denied him access to a phone once he got there. Nor does he explain how the WSP
16 allegedly failed to train Smarr, or how any such failure resulted in any constitutional violation he 17 claims to have suffered at the Mason County Jail. His remaining false imprisonment claim cites a 18 separate incarceration seven months before he even encountered Trooper Smarr, and appears to be 19 nothing more than the result of a cut-and-paste pleading error. [ Dkt. 10]. None of these claims are 20 supported by sufficient facts alleging personal participation on the part of Trooper Smarr.

21 Smarr had never met Longacre before or after July 4, 2015, and he has never has been 22 employed by Mason County, against whom Longacre has long since voluntarily dismissed his claims.
23 Dkt. 48. Accordingly, Trooper Smarr is entitled to dismissal of these claims as a matter of law.

1 IV. CONCLUSION

2 Trooper Smarr has qualified immunity from Longacre's § 1983 claims. Longacre's remaining
3 claims are not supported by facts that plausibly allege personal participation on the part of Trooper
4 Smarr and are likewise therefore subject to dismissal. For these reasons, Smarr's motion is 5 GRANTED and all of Longacre's remaining claims against are DISMISSED WITH 6 PREJUDICE.
